

A principle of time

by Omar Ruiz

The Transitorial Quantic Module of second-generation (TQM2) has been scheduled for its first manned time travel today, back to the Upper Pleistocene epoch. However, an unexpected and mysterious discovery has put a rather reluctant note in the willing efforts of the volunteer crew. During the archeological excavations, performed in the vicinity of the ignition area, an artifact, similar to the TQM2 was found. Next to the lying human corpses, located inside the acclimatized decompression chamber, the following log entry was recorded:

Log Entry #32: The study of the Neanderthal has been really fascinating. Nevertheless, just like the imperialist man, who embraces ambition and superiority in his colonizing acts and deems everything else inferior; so did we, succumbed to the underestimation and carelessness of our research. After the Laboratory break, the non-controlled specimens made it into the Control Room and damaged the mainframe storing the returning protocols. Will we... will we get back to the present, someday?